

THE DAILY EXPRESS.

TERRE-HAUTE, INDIANA.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1861.

Among our dispatches this morning, will be found a specimen of the manner in which the rebel leaders dupe and deceive the people who are fast leading to destruction. We allude to the dispatch published in the Memphis paper setting forth the annihilation of Montgomery's command by Kershaw, and the perfidious condition in which McClellan has placed Sikel at Selalia. It is really astonishing that men will so attempt to blind the minds of their people, thus rendering their disappointment more terrible in the day of their calamity. But it is said this is the only way the rebel army can be kept together.

The intelligence that Parson Brownlow, at the head of three thousand brave and loyal Tennesseeans, has met and routed a rebel force in East Tennessee, will send a thrill of joy to every patriotic heart. This noble and gallant hero, instead of being immersed in a dungeon as he had anticipated, is free, in the free mountains of his native land, with the banner of freedom over him, and surrounded by a host of followers, every man of whom is a hero, striking bravely at the very heart of the rebellion. Now, let our armies in Kentucky in Kentucky go on. "Go on!" be the last word, even the counter-sing, and let them strike home for their country, and the heroes of East Tennessee.

GOOD NEWS FROM SCOTT COUNTY.—An old and valued subscriber, a life-long Democrat, writing from Vienna, Scott county, under date of the 23d ult., says that at a township election for Justice of the Peace, the candidates were a Democrat and a Republican of the black stripe. The Democrat was elected by the largest majority ever given in the township. So much and so good for Scott county. Keep the ball rolling.—State Sentinel.

This is a victory worthy of the Sentinel's boast, in view of the fact that all the Democrats have gone to the war, or rather since the army is made up principally of Democrats. Though scarcely equal to the triumph at Blighampton last year, yet it is a glorious victory—a Justice of the Peace, elected in Tanbark township, Scott county, Fernando Wood will consider his defeat fully compensated for, when he hears from Scott county.

Presentation of Colors.
Editors Express: We furnish you, to-day, for publication, the address of Miss Louisa Perkins, on presenting a flag in behalf of the patriotic ladies of Terre-Haute, to the Forty Third Regiment, at Evansville.

The address and responses thereto, would have been published at the time, had it not been for the fact that the regiment was ordered into Kentucky the next day, and the gentleman having charge of the matter, had not time to attend to it.

Many of our readers were contributors to the flag, and they at least, will be pleased to hear the words spoken in their behalf by the lady whom they selected to present it to the brave men of the Forty Third.

As a literary effort, the address possesses merit of no ordinary character, and a spirit of non-stirring and death-defying patriotism breathes through every line. The gallant soldiers of the Forty Third, who, standing in solid phalanx, and facing the wind that cold Sunday afternoon, gazed with tearful eyes upon the fair speaker, and listened to her impassioned eloquence, her voice musical, and yet with power sufficient to be heard by every man, distinctly, above the war of elements; will treasure the scene in their heart memories, and when that flag shall float, as it inevitably will, above the dome of coming grandeur, to be lost or saved, their souls will be moved to a sterner purpose, and their arms strengthened for a more deadly struggle—they will

"Strike, till the last armed foe expires,
Strike, for their altars and their fires,
Strike, for the green graves of their fathers,
And for their native land."

ADVERTISE.
Men of the Forty-third, Officers and Soldiers:

Behold! and these silken folds, the starry blue, the pearly white, and the rosy hue, All standard colors of our chosen land, her emblem of peace, her emblem of war.

They are not unfamiliar to you; oh! no!—They have been cherished sacredly, since the first recollections of your boyhood, and a symbol of the most grand and glorious government the world ever knew. These Stars and Stripes were skillfully united and placed within your hands by fond loving mothers, when you scarcely realized their import—You then only knew they formed a bright, bright banner which you must protect from insult, and which, though possessed by you, must not like other toys, be cast aside in a day, but must be treasured with care. Yet, as you grew older, and learned the story of this rich legacy, how dearly bought and gratefully bequeathed, you resolved to bear it aloft, and support the Constitution which it represented, through any emergency of coming time. All this, the ladies of Terre Haute knew full well, and with the utmost confidence in your genuine, manly worth, your gallant bravery, and your soldierly valor, they have made deliver into your keeping, this, our flag; and "Our flag is the flag of the free," and much, much it will be when upheld by the strong, courageous arms of regiments like this.

Many times and oft, have its colors waved over scenes of conflict, and returned from the battle field in all the majesty of their ensign, proudly victorious. And now, with you, we anticipate for it a grand mission. There is much, yes, much to be done. We are trembling from center to circumference. The very walls of our nation are quivering in the storm, but with your strength, by the permission of our all-wise Father, we will again be supreme in our nationality.

Freedom has said,
"I see no strife nor going beneath the sun,
When banners rights are shield and sword."
We must echo the same, and if we would retain the charter of our Constitution, must send our loved ones forth at the risk of their lives, and our happiness. We, the mothers, wives, daughters and sisters, say, "God and God bless you, guard and defend you."

But this is not easily done, woman is not always strong in this respect. She must common patriotism with all the strength of her womanhood, and, with reason, resolve, that our hearts beat with the great pulse of the nation, if her institutions cannot be maintained we die politically and almost religiously.

Then if our country demands as a sacrifice, the lives of our loved ones, we must be ready and willing to say with one of old, "Father, not my will, but Thine be done," for it certainly is a righteous cause where so many noble men have already engaged, and now you, our best men, who are of most exalted characters are needed. You go forth, not to win a warrior's bloody wreath of fame, but to protect our friends, our homes, and the liberal Republic which these gorgeous hues represent.

The life blood of many, many beloved heroes has even now crimsoned the altar of our country. An Ellsworth, a Lyon and a Baker, with a host of heroic braves have already fought the good fight, and have been summoned up higher. 'Twas not the glory of battle that urged them onward, in this most holy cause, but rather that "glory which shines through the tomb." They were fully convinced that oppression would be the price of inaction, and you are equally conscious of the same fact. You realize our position as did they, and yet, we doubt not, fearlessly emulate their virtues, and imitate their gallantry on the field of battle.

And now, once more, let us assure you, that in your arm, guided by the Father's, we have most implicit faith, and are truly confident that all will be well. We cannot go with you to the scene of conflict, and be come exposed to the booming cannon and bursting shell. This you would not permit, and to prevent it, are luring the war-demon far from our homes. But there are many things which woman can do, to render your condition in camp life more comfortable than it would otherwise be. And we pledge you, that all which can be done in this manner, shall be done by swift hands and willing hearts. There is nothing, which we can do, to show how much we appreciate your motives, that will be left undone.

And now, independent freemen, soldier brothers, accept from the ladies of Terre Haute, as a token of their prayerful interest, and sanguine hopes, this flag, which must never, no, never, be trampled by the foe.

Expulsion of the Rebel Burnett from Congress.

On Tuesday last Mr. Dunn of Indiana offered the following:

Resolved, That the said Henry C. Burnett, a member of this House from Kentucky, is in open rebellion against the Government of the United States, therefore,

Resolved, That the said Henry C. Burnett be and he is hereby expelled from this House, and that the Governor of Kentucky be notified of his expulsion.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed not to pay Mr. Burnett his salary, which has accrued since the close of the extra session.

Mr. Wickliffe said he had intended to propose and submit something like an obituary notice of his colleague. (Laughter.) The latter was not, as the resolution asserted, in armed rebellion, but leads a provisional government. Not satisfied with the treatment of this Government, to maintain the Union, nor satisfied with the course of his State, he Burnett has assumed the important duty of organizing another Government for the better protection of the lives, property and liberty of the people of Kentucky. In this undertaking he has employed "iron-clad" Buckner, who was not only somewhat assimilated in name, but in deeds, to Simon Girty, who once headed the Indians in Kentucky.

Three times has the gallant State of Kentucky declared by overwhelming majorities that she would not leave the United States to run after strange gods, or for the so-called Southern Confederacy. Notwithstanding her repeated declarations for the Union, and in violation of her well known sentiments, the people have been told that the object of the convention, and the so-called Southern Confederacy was to respect the condition of Kentucky, which it pretended would be done by the Government of the United States. The Union men of Kentucky never did deny the right of the Federal Government to occupy its soil for the exercise of the purposes implied by the Constitution. Kentucky did acknowledge her obligations, and expressed her intention to fulfill them. The proclamation of the Governor of Kentucky declared that she would not leave the United States. Messengers of peace were sent to the Executive of the United States, and one to the President of the Southern Government, to know what was intended to be done with Kentucky. The former said it was intended to maintain the law and the Constitution of the United States, and that this was believed to be the will of the people of Kentucky. The latter declared he intended to respect the neutrality of Kentucky as understood by the secession party of that State, but the Southern President did not tell them that he had matured a plan to use them at different points, no did he tell them there was on the statute book of the Southern Government a law providing money and means, not to sustain Kentucky against oppression, but to carry her into the Southern Confederacy against the majority of two-thirds of the entire State. The Provisional Government of Kentucky was sent to see the Governor of Kentucky—Meanwhile, Mr. Burnett at the head of the order of things in the discharge of his official and as an armed force has been gathered, composed of young, desperate and reckless men, commanded by Buckner.

In conclusion, Mr. Wickliffe said, with the blessing of God I predict that by the 25th of December no rebel foot will be found on the soil of Kentucky. Amen.

The resolution for the expulsion of Burnett was adopted. Adjourned.

Thrilling Prophecy.
In last February Alabama seceded. That brave old man, Senator Clement, who had, until then, treated all the storms of wild fanaticism, and clung to the flag of our Union, yielded to the popular clamor, and unheeded his sword in a cause he hated, and one he knew could not succeed. He wrote the following to a friend:

"We are now in the hands of the Stars and Stripes, and abandoned the high privilege of calling ourselves American citizens. I am not ashamed to confess that I could not restrain my tears when the old banner, which I have followed through so many dangers, was taken down, and the flag of Alabama was raised in its place; I cannot restrain them now when I am writing, but the deed is done—now a new era has dawned, and all that I can promise is, that no effort shall be spared on my part to prevent it from becoming an era of disgrace. If we are not involved in a war, we soon shall be. There is no hope of peace, and he is but little better than a madman who dreams of long exemption from invasion. I shall meet it when it comes as a soldier should, and fight through it as long as a hope remains. When every thing is lost, as I fear it may be, unless your counsel should prevail than those which have heretofore directed us, I shall drag my body to the next battle field, and lay down a life which has lost its value."

Governor Sprague's advice to the Rhode Island Antislavery was "First put your shoulders to the wheel and then call upon Providence."

McClellan's General Order About Chaplains.

The following is Gen. McClellan's "Regulation of Chaplains," alligned to recently in our special dispatches:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,
WASHINGTON, Nov. 27, 1861.
The Sunday morning services prescribed by article thirty, Revised Army Regulations, will hereafter be made at eight o'clock A. M. Congress having by law provided for the employment of Chaplains for the Army, it was no doubt designed, and the General Regulations directed, that no official place obstacles in the way of a proper exercise of the functions of these officers. It is therefore ordered that in future the Sunday morning services will commence at eleven o'clock, unless manifest military reasons prevent. Commanding officers will see that all persons connected with these commands, when not on guard or other important duty requiring their constant attention, have the opportunity afforded them of attending divine service.

The second article of war earnestly recommends all officers and soldiers diligently to attend divine service, and attaches a penalty for irreverent behavior while at the place of worship.

Chaplain will at all times be permitted to visit the camps, quarters and hospitals within the limits of the commands to which they are attached, to be held free and uninterrupted intercourse with the officers and soldiers of duty. Chaplains will not in future, be required to appear at reviews or inspections. It is believed their time and services may be more profitably employed elsewhere.

It is enjoined upon all persons connected with the army to preserve at all times a respectful deportment toward chaplains, and to give them a hearty co-operation in their efforts to promote and improve the moral condition of the army.

By command of Major-General McClellan,
S. WILLIAMS, Asst. Adj. Gen.

Telegraphic Correspondence of Daily Commercial Breckinridge Breke out and Returns to Bowling Green.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 4.
General Breckinridge, contrary to the expectation of our army in Kentucky, has about faced and returned to Bowling Green. Gen. Crittenden is severely perplexed, as he was making arrangements to bag the General and his entire force. This is the third time that Breckinridge has attempted to send a force to the Ohio River and capture "Lincoln's Hessians" at Henderson and Owensboro.

When Mr. Russell, the London Times correspondent heard of the arrest of Mason and Sidel, he remarked, "I would like to have seen poor Sidel's face when he was arrested; surely he must have looked very funny." Mr. Russell said nothing about the overhauling of the Trent.

STOLEN OR STRAYED.
TWO HORSES were either stolen or cut loose and strayed away from the Church two miles South of Princeton, on Saturday night last. One is a black horse 5 years old, with a white star in his forehead, 15 hands high, not shod, and on a saddle and bridle. The other is a horse—small star in the forehead, tall, color of a bay, 4 years old last spring, had on a bridle only to show.

A liberal reward will be given for any information that will lead to their recovery.
